Chapter 1 by Cat4055

"One beautiful day." Narrator #1 started.

"No, no, no!" Narrator #2 said, "That is the worst way to start this story!"

"Well then, how do you think I should start it?" Narrator #1 said back.

"Like this." Narrator #2 said, "One dark and stormy night."

"Does it have to be stormy?" Laurel yells from the story, "I really don't want to be wet right now."

Chapter 2 by Spirit

Narrator #2 replies inconspicuously "It was a dark and even stormier night! Also, it the temperature suddenly dropped ten degrees in the area."

"Okay, okay I get it! You don't like me complaining, or talking to you for that matter." Laurel sighs. "But I really liked this dress."

"Anyway, as I was saying." Narrator #2 clears his throat. "It was a dark and stormy night. A young girl wanders in the dark of night, looking for someone that had gotten lost in the dark, spooky forest."

Follows and an emoji reaction were just being their normal selves. I think it was nice and it was nothing it was stupid.

Narrator #1 buts in. "Suddenly, a hungry, wild tiger appears!"

A giant, hungry tiger appears out of the bushes near Laurel. She looked over at it and yelped. They weren't just going to make things more difficult, they were going to kill her.

Narrator #2 starts to yell at Narrator #1, "Why did you do that!"

Narrator #1 replies, "For the drama!"

Narrator #2 yells back, "We don't want to kill her!"

Narrator #1 sighs, "A sword suddenly appears in the valiant young girl's hand."

A dazzling, silver sword appears in her hand.

Narrator #2 screams, "That's not going to help you idiot!"

Chapter 3 by Rav Vin

Narrator #1 replies, "No death in the beginning itself"

Narrator #2 said, "A sword is appearing out of nowhere?"

Narrator #1 sighs, "It's night! And she is alone, please...?"

Laurel felt a ray of hope, after all they are good people. The tiger spoke, "Why are you here?"

"I'm looking for someone"

"Someone?"

"Yes"

"My love"

Narrator #1 buts in. "Love?"

Narrator #2 said, "Which is why she is risking her life."

Laurel have no much choice

"Once in a palace, where 5 soldiers stayed. Each soldier had 5 rooms. In each room there were 5 big tigers. Each big tiger has 5 little tigers. Each tiger has 4 legs. How many legs are there in the palace?"

Chapter 4 by Coraline Castell

"Why, that is a riddle as old as my mother!" Narrator #2 said a little too loudly.

"Keep it down or you will disturb her," Narrator #1 advised in a whisper.

The truth was that Laurel had never been exceptionally good at math. Not that it was something to be ashamed of! All her friends seemed to be awful at it as well.

"So, what say you, child?" Asked the hungry wild tiger playing with its whiskers. "Do you... give up?" He licked his lips, "up" coming out as a pop in his mouth.

"Oh in the name of well written Shakespearian prose!" Declared Narrator #2. "It's 3012." He whispered to the girl.

"3012, of course, Mr. Tiger! I was merely testing you!"

"Naturally. What is life without its trials? Very well, you pass." He made a brief pause before letting her on. "Although I am very inclined on knowing the meaning behind these speech bubbles popping up in thin air. I can't read, you see."

"Oh my, is he talking about us?" Inquired a restless Narrator #1.

"Indeed! Didn't I tell you narrating Laurel's stories in a comic book wasn't that much of a smart idea? We should be doing this in an epic movie with a Hans Zimmer score!" Berrated a passionate Narrator #2.

"What can I say, I've always loved reading Batman comic books... wouldn't Laurel look good in a bat costume?" Narrator #1 suggested.

Narrator #1: " thank you clears throat trusty sword in hand, Laurel sped through the forest in her sexy, and very revealing lady bat costume, flashing her boobs to everyone she saw along the path"

Laurel: " whoah, whoah, whoah, that was zero to sixty. Lists start with something else. I am not going to wear a 'very revealing' costume anywhere, especially not on a 'dark and stormy night'. 2, back me up here"

Narrator #2: " Hold on. 1 might have something here. Let's see where he goes with this."

Laurel: " okay fine. But if you do anything freaky, I will remove myself from this story and you two will have to hire a new main character.

Narrator #1: Thank you. Now, as I was saying: Laurel continued through the forest in this manner, attracting many men, each wanting her for himself. A mighty war took place in the kingdom and a single man claimed victory. His trophy was to have the beautiful Laurel for himself. He was 6' 2", and-"

Laurel: " wait. Can he be 6' 4"?

Narrator #2: " what?"

Laurel: " Well, I've always wanted a boyfriend that was 6' 4"

Narrator #2: " Fine. He was 6' 4" and very attractive. He had flowing blonde hair, a blinding white smile, and a mysterious air about him that swayed every woman who caught sight of him"

Chapter 6 by Aelin_Herondale6

Narrator #1: "But not Laurel"

Narrator #2: "What! Why not?"

Narrator #1: "I feel that the main point of the story is that Laurel is a good girl and her little love, who has been kidnapped, is the main point of the story."

Narrator #2: "The love story can be added to the main point of the story."

Laurel: "Why with the complications!"

Narrator #2: "No one is gonna want to read this if there aren't some complications!"

Narrator #1: "So Laurel runs through the forest trying to shake her persurer. She finds a hut in the woods and hides in in, her persurer runs past her never to see her again!"

Chapter 7 by Zoriex

Narrator #2: "Not enough complications!"

Laurel: "Are you f-"

Narrator #2: "Suddenly, a scream like that of a 6'4" buff man with flowing blonde locks that are obviously better maintained than Laurel's-"

Laurel: "Hey!"

Narrator #2: "- who just had his balls ripped right off by a long-whiskered Bengal tiger pierces the night!"

Laurel: "Oh for Chr-"

Narrator #1: "And a flash of lightning lights up the night, revealing a dark silhouette standing right at the window of the hut that Laurel had just ran in!"

Laurel: "Wow, and to think you were the sensible one, #1"

Narrator #1: "Using the greatsword that was granted by the almighty Narrator #1, Laurel bursts through the door leading to the outside and slices through the shadow!"

Laurel: "Gah!"

Laurel: "OH MY GOD!"

Laurel: "What the-"

Narrator #1: "Who wasn't her real mother but a witch that had enchanted Laurel's gay, 6'4" Fabio looking father into having sex with her, thus birthing Laurel, the scantily clad girl in a Bat Woman costume!"

Laurel: "Wow."

Narrator: #2: "Yep!"

Laurel: "So you just set me up with my dad and then had a tiger rip off his dick and then made me run him through with a gigantic sword while cosplaying as a scantily clothed Bat Woman?"

Narrator #2: "If you put it that way..."

Narrator#1: "Ah-ha! What if we say that the man you just killed was your stepfather!"

Narrator #2: "Perfect! It down plays the complications a bit but I can see that working."

Narrator #1: "I am such a genius."

Laurel: "You keep telling yourself that, if that's what gets you through the day."

Narrator #1: "No, no, no. I'll keep telling myself that because it's true!"

Narrator #2: "Do you see what I have to work with?"

Chapter 8 by elementaljelly

Narrator #1: "Okay! Back to business! After Laurel brutally sliced apart her stepfather, she suddenly finds herself in front of a gigantic stone wall!"

Laurel: "How?! That wall wasn't there before!"

Narrator #2: "Never question the powers of my imagination."

Narrator #1: "Out of the blue, I'm gonna need you to tell me who your mother is and which mother who tells Laurel that she has special powers."

Narrator #2: "That enabled her to attack all males with a 50% success rate!"

Narrator #1 "Suddenly, males of all ages fling themselves against Laurel!"

Laurel: "WTF! There are babies clinging on to me! I quit!"

Narrator #1: "Well, there goes our main character..."

Narrator #2: "I just don't understand why she left...we were just getting started..."
